Read the following passage to answer question (4)

While there is a whole school of spirit photography alleging to produce pictures of ghosts, the first pictures of "ghosts" were actually accidents. In the early days of photography, a long exposure time was required to capture an image. A person who stepped into, and then out of, the camera's range during the exposure would be caught on the film as a transparent, ghostly-looking blur. It didn't take long for dishonorable photographers to create fraudulent photographs in which spirits appear to be hovering over the living sitters. One of the most famous of these unscrupulous people was William Mumler, a Boston engraver, who took over 2,500 spirit photographs which he purported to be pictures of real ghosts.

4. According to the passage, the first photographic images of "ghosts" appeared because:

- A) moving subjects appeared as a transparent, ghostly blur
- B) early film was as accurate as modern film
- C) the necessary exposure time was usually impractical
- D) the ghosts attracted public attention
